Book orders also come, he said, from police departments, military men, bookstores and persons overseas.

Mr. Brown still active in the Army Reserve, spent 15 months in Vietnam. He was a Special Forces team leader on the Cambodian border, where he was wounded.

Although his personal politics are conservative, he went to Cuba short, after Fidel Castro had taken over and brought back a copy of "150 Questions for a Guerrilla," by Gen. Alberto Bayo, who trained top Cuban revolutionaries. Mr. Brown had the book translated, and it was his first publication.

Mr. Brown was one of the leaders of the parachute medical team that jumped into the Peruvian mountains following a severe earthquake there in 1970.

Since 1967, he has been working on a book on Central Intelligence Agency operations in the Caribbean area.
