Dear Mr. Reiss,

Your writing is about like mine. I cannot make out all of your note. In the U.S. 63 houses declined the book, for varying reasons. This is set forth in the Preface.

Of one thing there can be no questions the Commission was not at all objective. If you doubt this, and to find the answers to your other questions, may I suggest you let the book speak for itself?

If I understand another question, I do not think it is wise for one man to pretend he can enter the mind of another.

WHITEWASH is now available to all bookstore, and I imagine many in New York have it.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg

Dear Sir;

Please answer the incl.

What "house" rejected the M.S. and for what reasons?

Concern: Allowing all negative conditions stated are correct, allowing all evidence presented is moot; allowing all that has been written is accurate: what is the purpose for the commission to have proceeded as it did? Is there a conclusion (facts) that the commission conducted its investigation in any thing but an objective manner.

Is there any reason to believe there was a concerted effort to assassinate the president?

Is there a conclusion to the book? Or was it an examination of the authors research done without prejudice? SIMPLY
