HECKLERS OF BUND SMASH WINDOWS

Woman's Glass-Enclosed Porch Stoned by N. J. Crowd

Special Dispatch to New York Post
NEW MILFORD, N. J., Oct. 10.—

In the third violent demonstration against the German-American Bund in New Jersey in the last month, anti-Nazis last night broke a dozen panes in Miss Caroline Meade's glass-enclosed porch by throwing stones, onions, apples and one flower pot during a Bund meeting.

Miss Meade, whose husband, Adam Kunze, is a Bund member, invited the public to her meeting. Among those who responded were ten men in the Bund uniform, members of the Andrew Jackson Veterans' Association of Union City, Jewish war veterans, members of a Czech organization from Little Ferry and ninety policemen and firemen.

About 300 of the anti-Nazis were unable to get into the crowded meeting, but they enlivened it considerably by intermittent tossing of missiles which punctuated the remarks of the speakers with the crash of breaking glass. The police, lined up in the rear, did not interfere.

Those inside booed and heckled the speakers. When G. Wilhelm Kunze, director of public relations for the Bund, gave the Nazi salute as he arose to speak, some one shouted, "Salute American!"

Kunze retorted, "My father and my grandfather were citizens, and I'm a citizen, and if we can't have a meeting here without interruption, there is something wrong with Americanism."

A rock crashed through a window.

"Can't we get police protection?" asked the chairman, J. C. Fitting.

"Let them break the windows," Miss Meade answered.

Kunze went on with his speech, saying that the Jews created an economic problem.

"So many of us have gone through the same damn experience in the old country after the war—," he began.

"I thought you were an American!" a heckler shouted. The crowd chanted, "Alien! Alien! Alien!" and a stone crashed inside and broke the microphone Kunze was using.

The meeting broke up soon after that, and when the Bund opponents went to their automobiles they found that other anti-Nazis had let the air out of their tires, apparently under the impression that the cars belonged to Bund sympathizers.

When Miss Meade complained to Police Chief Roy Meade about lack of police protection, he reminded her that she had asked him not to bring up his men unless she called for them.

"I'm glad it happened," Miss Meade said. "It was a demonstration of what is wrong with democracy."
