Nineteen thousand members and friends of the German-American Bund rallied in Madison Square Garden last night behind a police cordon "strong enough to stop a revolution," to celebrate the birthday of George Washington.

Outside a considerably larger crowd made two organized efforts to stampede the police lines, and kept up a desultory attack from 6:30 P. M. until the meeting ended, close to midnight.

Thirteen arrests were made on minor charges and several persons, including police, were treated for minor injuries.

The closest approach to a serious incident was when Isadore Green-
