MDR
NEW YORK, March 3—(UP)—Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American Bund, heard himself denounced today as "yellow."

The man who berated him was Joseph Goldstein, Brooklyn lawyer, and complainant against Kuhn in a criminal libel action

"He is yellow and his gang is yellow," Goldstein told Magistrate Jeanette G. Brill in opposing Kuhn's release in the custody of his attorney pending a hearing on the charge next March 10.

It was the first of three separate appearances under subpoena which the Bund leader was scheduled to make today. The others were in connection with an inquiry into the Nazi organization by Commissioner of Investigations William B. Herlands and with a Supreme Court action by the attorney general to force publication of the names of officers in the Bund newspaper, the weekly Deutscher Weckruf und Beobachter.

LIBELED

Goldstein charged that the Bund newspaper had libeled him in an article some months ago and that Kuhn was responsible.

In a court room guarded by nearly 70 policemen, Kuhn pleaded ignorance of the article and arranged, through his attorney, for a hearing later.

Goldstein objected so vehemently to Kuhn's parole without bail, and the Bund leader's attorney, V. H. Kalendarian, responded so sharply that the magistrate from time to time remonstrated with, "gentlemen, please!"

At first Kuhn refused to give his real address but finally admitted it was 33-42 73rd Street, Jackson Heights, instead of 178

East 85th Street, Manhattan. Goldstein asserted that the Nazi chieftain did not live at the Manhattan address.

OBJECTS

When Kalendarian asked that Kuhn be paroled in his custody, Goldstein objected.

"He should not enjoy special privileges. I think he should be held in bail. We had great difficulty in serving him. I know he will not come back. He's here because he is yellow and his gang is yellow."

Assistant District Attorney Henry Martucello, agreeing to parole, said he would be responsible for Kuhn.

"He is assuming a big responsibility," Goldstein said. "For two weeks I've been trying to serve Kuhn with 17 detectives, but every time we called they told us that he was out to lunch or some place."

When Kuhn left to answer the other subpoenas, patrolmen lined the court room aisles and made all spectators remain in their seats. A party of plainclothesmen escorted Kuhn and his companions to their automobile.
