MONTEVIDEO, July 29 (ALN).— Eight important Nazi war criminals and "capital representing many millions of pesos" were carried to safety in Argentina by Nazi submarine U-530 before its surrender at the Mar del Plata naval base on July 10, the newspaper Diario Popular, quoting well-informed sources, declared here this week.

It added that Nazi loot which could not be landed was taken off the sub at Mar del Plata by Argentine government representatives, and that vital papers were destroyed.

Diario Popular stated that the landings took place near General Lavalle, from which road and rail transport is practically nonexistent and which is uninhabited. In this connection it is interesting to note that the Buenos Aires newspaper Critica reports that a special police mission was sent to General Lavalle and that several people in the general area reported having seen a submarine.

"Certain Argentine government quarters were informed and co-operated" in the landings, Diario Popular added. "A special automobile was sent to transport the Nazis to Buenos Aires.

"The sub had been hunted by the Brazilian Navy in the northern and by the United Nations Navy in the southern Atlantic and, as it could not reach Japan, it surrendered."
