Technocracy Revitalized

Auto Force—A unit of Technocracy's motor corps in New York.

of the cars can be seen the organization emblem—the monad symbol.

must fill out a long and intimate questionnaire and pay $5-a-year dues.

New Hiller

Leader_Howard Scott (remember him?) is once again plugging his Technocracy movement. He's shown in his "continental headquarters" in New York.

Sudden Wealth Spurts Movement Into Life

A revitalized Technocracy, Inc.—in financial doldrums since 1933—recently has acquired wealth, a uniform, an extensive propaganda campaign stating America's war needs, and, in Washington, a lot of scenery. A gray suit and a gray shirt, an emblem "older than the swastika," decorate the organization, which, its members insist, is the essence of democracy. But that is about all. Members Nelson Berman (2010 Channing-st ne) and Lyman Wilkinson (3150 Q-st nw) were reticent in an interwiew with

Auto Force_A unit of Technocracy's motor corps in New York. of the cars can be seen the organization emblem—the monad symbol. must fill out a long and intimate questionnaire and pay $5-a-year dues.

Atop the sign on the roof Applicants for admission

-Bill Mann, chairman and District director of the movement, speaking to a group of interested members at the Mt. Pleasant Library.

Mapping Plans_Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Berman, 2010 Channing-st ne, look at Technocracy's proposed continental reorganization. Mr. Berman is a War Department employe.

eader_Howard Scott ging his Technocracy move headquarters" in New Yor

Sudden W Movement

A revitalized Technocra 1933—recently has acquire aganda campaign stating 1 ton, a lot of scenery. A & "older than the swastika," members insist, is the esse all. Members Nelson Bern Wilkinson (3150 Q-st nw) The News.

The organization, administered Mt. Pleasant Branch of the Libi following the crash, when econd for two years, then died under says, diverted the public from p

Based on a four-hour-day, rei pays off in direct proportion to for everything. An area of the North and part of South Ame method of assigning number des

'ALL TOO DETAILED'

According to devotees of the n explain properly in a few senten-

Questioned about the sudden purchase of full-page advertisem campaign which has cost nearly came solely from "members' cont ship of the organization nationa able."

Asked the number of local me few members authorized to know secretary of branches know then "What is the significance of t uniform?" he was asked.

"The monad is merely an old s by the organization," he said, "i members known to the general p

AN ANCIENT EMBLEM

According to Webster's Dictions onal line thru its center, is emb onal line thru its center, is emit psychical or spiritual in nature, r. Mr. Berman was asked if the scription of men and machines, a job of co-ordinating the conscript of the American Government.

"Absolutely not," he snapped. and has no intention of acting a the organization takes on the w. President Scott in a recent; political action it will be the last.

political action it will be the last of present price systems and their to force the transition into a fur Mr. Scott adds, is a technocratic
Mr. Berman referred to Mr. S not predicting any move on the p

'NO SUDDEN WEALTH'

During an interview in "Contin President Scott, questioned about of gray-painted cars inscribed wi wealth, and was contributed by privately owned by members who Mr. Berman said that no memb Mr. Berman said that no memorand added that only about 10 per a Both Mr. Berman and Mr. Wilk wear the uniform. Neither would William Mann. 1230 Euclid-st remploye of the War Department Berman and Wilkinson employe of the war Department Berman and Wilkinson. "I am no longer a member of believe in its principles. My resig many demands on my time."

Atop the sign on the roof ey's motor corps in New York. Applicants for admission emblem—the monad symbol. onnaire and pay $5-a-year dues.

-Staff Photo nd District director of the movement, speaking to a group ant Library.

Nelson Berman, 2010 Channing-st ne, look at Technocracy's Mr. Berman is a War Department employe.

Leader—Howard Scott (remember him?) is once again plugging his Technocracy movement. He's shown in his "continental headquarters" in New York.

Sudden Wealth Spurts Movement Into Life

A revitalized Technocracy Inc. in financial doldrums since 1933—recently has acquired wealth, a uniform, an extensive propaganda campaign stating America's war needs, and, in Washington, a lot of scenery. A gray suit and a gray shirt, an emblem "older than the swastika," decorate the organization, which, its members insist, is the essence of democracy. But that is about all. Members Nelson Berman (2010 Channing-st ne) and Lyman Wilkinson (3150 Q-st nw) were reticent in an interwiew with The News.

The organization, administered in the District thru frequent meetings in the Mt. Pleasant Branch of the Library, gained national recognition in the panic following the crash, when economic straws were in the wind. It flourished for two years, then died under the New Deal, which, President Howard Scott says, diverted the public from political and economic cure-alls.

Based on a four-hour-day, retire-when-you're-45 financial structure, which pays off in direct proportion to effort output, the system uses numerical tags for everything. An area of the projected "Technate of America," reorganized North and part of South America, is designated a M-3775969846084. method of assigning number designations is mysterious.

'ALL TOO DETAILED'

According to devotees of the movement, the whole thing is "too detailed to explain properly in a few sentences," and is not explained at all.

Questioned about the sudden burst of prosperity, which made possible the purchase of full-page advertisements in 100 national newspapers, and a radio campaign which has cost nearly $20,000 to date, Mr. Berman said the money came solely from "members' contributions." Asked the approximate membership of the organization nationally, he answered, "Those figures are unavailable."

Asked the number of local members, Mr. Berman replied: "There are very few members authorized to know those figures, too. Only the director and secretary of branches know them."

"What is the significance of the monad, and what is the purpose of the uniform?" he was asked.

"The monad is merely an old symbol and signifies nothing, at least as used by the organization," he said, "and the uniform was adopted only to make members known to the general public."

AN ANCIENT EMBLEM

According to Webster's Dictionary, the monad, a circle with a curved diagonal line thru its center, is emblematic of "an individual elementary being, psychical or spiritual in nature, reflecting within itself the whole universe."

Mr. Berman was asked if the propaganda campaign, calling for total conscription of men and machines, and plugging President Howard Scott for the job of co-ordinating the conscription, were forerunners of economic alteration of the American Government.

of the American Government.

"Absolutely not," he snapped. "Technocracy, Inc., is not a political party, and has no intention of acting as such. The campaign is simply the stand the organization takes on the war effort."

President Scott in a recent statement said that if "Technocracy takes political action it will be the last political action, as it will be for the abolition of present price systems and their accompanying political administrations, and to force the transition into a functional mechanical Technate." A Technate,

Mr. Scott adds, is a technocratic state.

Mr. Berman referred to Mr. Scott's statement as a "hypothetical remark, not predicting any move on the part of the organization."

'NO SUDDEN WEALTH'

No sudden wealth During an interview in "Continental Headquarters" in New York recently, President Scott, questioned about his movement's sudden wealth and a fleet of gray-painted cars inscribed with the monad, replied: "This is no sudden wealth, and was contributed by those in the organization. The autos are privately owned by members who decided to paint them uniformly."

Mr. Berman said that no members in the District have painted their autos, and added that only about 10 per cent of local followers wear the gray uniform. Both Mr. Berman and Mr. Wilkinson, District organizer for the movement, wear the uniform. Neither would reveal the names of other members here.

William Mann, 1230 Euclid-st nw, former organizer in the District and an employe of the War Department, would add nothing to the interview with Berman and Wilkinson.

Berman and Wilkinson.

"I am no longer a member of the movement," Mr. Mann said, "but still believe in its principles. My resignation was accepted when my job made too many demands on my time."