

Dear Gerry,

3/19/91

A friend has made it possible for me to have a part-time student helper. She is one of Jerry's students, is careful, efficient, bright and conscientious. So, I'm lucky and I working on King again. With some new problems one of which is not being able to locate some of the notes I made when I first got the records. This is one of the reasons I write.

More than I would have liked the notes relate to compelling compliance in the lawsuit and to matters for Jim Cesar, my attorney, to raise. However, those we have located, including those I made on HQ MURKIN, are quite informative (although I am sure also quite incomplete) and you may want to look at them when you are here again.

Of the HQ and Memphis Invaders and strike files ~~I~~<sup>we</sup> have found only the notes on the Memphis Invaders files. I asked Jerry if when he copied the ~~the~~<sup>we</sup> files he got any notes. He does not recall any. He suggested that when I made copies for you some may have been included. If any other than Memphis Invaders are in what I copied for you I'd appreciate copies as soon as you can conveniently provide them.

If you and your associate have not read the Memphis Invaders notes I think you both should. They were in the front of what I copied for you.

I never read them until today! This is because the bastardly FBI was more than usually bastardly. They were to have provided copies as they were made and by a certain date. Instead, and this include the entire Memphis MURKIN file, soon followed by those of the other six or seven field offices from which I got records,, they held them all up until they dumped that mass of Memphis records on me. I had to go over them much too fast because of the ongoing litigation. However, I made many fewer typos in those days and all I saw presented no problem in comprehension at all.

This one set of notes, woefully incomplete, is nonetheless a real reflection of the depth and breadth of the FBI's domestic intelligence operations. They relate to but a single field office and narrowly to blacks but if you think of all the other places, many if not most of which had more active and more militant black activities in the late 60s,

I think it can give you an understanding of what simply had to be a really enormous Gestapo/KGB operations. The number of filing duplications is one of the indications of the enormity of this domestic intelligence, and of Hoover's determination to find or create prosecutable offenses when there were not <sup>ne</sup> and no reason to even suspect any.

You and your students may be interested in the penetration of the educational institutions, including high schools, and the gathering of personal information for supposedly proscribed uses. and some of these uses. Including pressuring parents and other relatives through their employment.

What also may interest you, Gerry told me today that after his speech at Hood similar to the one he made there a bright student came to see him and offered to do what I've so long wanted done, make at least a tabulation of those 402 pages of field office holdings on King and his closest relatives and associates. Best to you all,

David
