

Dear *An,

9/23/76

When you come back all refreshed and rested and even more placid that usual you'll in time come across the attached letters to Kelley and Shabson.

Then you will tell yourself ny,ny, he got mad again.

True.

But I didn't begin that way.

Then the full impact of what those retreated Nazis are up to did anger me.

They even fake Kelley's signature when he is in the hospital, too.

Why the hell can't someone else sign a letter? Easy. Not that Kelley loses face. That you can sure in an specific instance.

I'll bet that if not Wisconsin one of his cronies wrote this letter that Kelley never saw.

I don't for a minute think any of these authentic law violators will ever do anything, but I wanted to register my protest and make a record for their files as well as my own.

Besides, it is time that someone made a record of Levi and his Office of Professional Misconduct Coverage.

When these scoundrels try to amend the law again I think I'll ask to be heard.

You will note that all my complaints have to do with deliberate non-compliance, carried to defalcation.

You will see what I'll have done to their statistical approach to non-compliance.

If my so-called better leg had not been bothering me I'd probably have gone on to other affidavits to be responded to and let Kelley's letter wait.

By the way, I had to involve FOIA to learn they do not use sequential numbers.

The swelling has reduced and the discomfort is less but it remains disconcerting.

I'm never going to recognize the Department of Justice monopoly on white-collar crime and I'm never going to like what they do to me and my work and my life in their illegality. Nor am I about to forget this really nasty business of waiting until they know you will be away to file all these papers, leaving me with the need to address everything because when you come back you'll have no time to tell me what to address. And that will mean much perhaps unnecessary reading for you.

This whole business is so despicable!

Whether or not my letter is wise, it is factually correct. It makes a record. In time, if it accomplishes nothing now, it can be drawn upon.

Meanwhile, I'll be interested in seeing if these law people recognize the Constitution.

They sure as hell do not recognize the law!

Best,
