

Twice each day a summary of King assassination developments ~~was~~ was prepared for the Attorney General. All of these have not been provided to Weisberg.

During the processing of the Murkin file the FBI came across a large number of records that originated in the Department of Justice, the Central Intelligence Agency, the State Department and other agencies. Most of these have not been delivered to Weisberg.

The FBI has done nothing to provide these records to Weisberg.

It refused his request to ask the other agencies to respond to the referrals.

The FBI has not processed these records in accord with the National Security Council Director on compliance with Executive Order 11652.

During the processing of the records that were provided to Weisberg the FBI came ~~across~~ across and read a large number of records that stated described attachments were attached, and found that in the Murkin file these attachments were missing. These missing attachments have not been provided to Weisberg.

Various names were withheld at the outset of the processing of the Murkin files. These included the names of known FBI agents, witnesses at the Memphis court proceedings and a large number of others whose names had been published many times, including with the information that was in the FBI Murkin files. No records have been provided in which these improper withholdings were replaced, despite the requests by Weisberg and the order of the Court.

Where processed records refer to other records filed elsewhere no searches were made in these other files to obtain and provide the records referred to, this includes but is not limited to field offices.

Weisberg has written the FBI at length and informed it verbally of many instances of what he described as non-compliance. Most of these communications remain without response or compliance. This includes but is not limited to the four sections of the Memphis Field Office files that were to have been delivered to him by November 1977.

Add under rifle: The FBI swabbed the barrel of the wrong rifle, the one it knew could not be fired in the condition in which it was, to determine if it had been fired recently but it did not swab the barrel of the rifle it describes as the murder rifle to determine if it had been fired recently.
