

TICKLERS

Phillips swore that all ticklers are kept for brief periods of time only and are "routinely" destroyed. These ticklers disclosed to Mark Allen are more than two decades old.

Here we have the very component that swore to the "routine" destruction of FBI ticklers in this litigation simultaneously in possession of extant and enormous ticklers more than 20 years old. (I believe that its deponent, Phillips, is the supervisor in both cases and if true he obviously knew that he lied to Smith. But I did disprove his attestations under oath and Smith ignored me and my proofs. Of course this told me that the discovery demand was mere stonewalling because I had provided FBI records disproving Phillips' attestations. Providing the same material all over again would have accomplished nothing but more wasting of me.)

There was no search for any ticklers in Dallas. Instead Phillips swore, in Washington, that Dallas had none. No discovery from me would have enabled the FBI to prove that it had searched when it hadn't and hadn't even claimed it had, and no discovery from me would have enabled the FBI to prove that it had complied when it hadn't -- and knew it hadn't.
