agitators sent three and a third not yet identified, to Ciudad Juarez to incite student groups to demonstrate against and stone the American Consulate at Ciudad Juarez on May 23, 1960, Students' Day. The Chessman case, United States-Cuban Policy, and attacks on Mexican monopolists (Eloy Vallina, in particular) are to be used as the slogans for their student demonstration. Their efforts have resulted in very little success to date, with only La Escuela Normal Nocturna giving them any backing. Apparently they are quite disappointed with the results, but intend to establish a cell among the students in Juarez to solidify their position. the leader of the three-man group, has returned to Chihuahua City, leaving the other two to carry on the work. At the moment the attack on the Consulate seems likely to fail; however, the Consulate will watch their future activities very closely and will request police protection if and when appropriate.

This may very well be a local problem, in which case other posts in Mexico may not be affected. However, if the purpose behind the demonstration is to create the impression that widespread anti-United States feeling exists in Mexico, all posts may be attacked.
