Another means of distributing propaganda are thought to be "agitators", or in English "agitators' points" these are located at desks or in small offices, open 18 hours a day they are manned by "volunteers" communist and young communist party members. They are for the distribution of pamphlets, bulletins and other party literature, for the most or less informal meetings of groups of communist party members, formed in the early 1920's they were then points of armed workers located near to each other, who could put down "white" uprising, or conveniently arrest anyone in the neighborhood now their functions have slightly changed but it still remains that any party member may, come in and report disloyal comments are an unguarded moment on the part of any citizen. There is always a telephone handy here. In Munich there are only 12 movie houses, but 58 agepools in the telephone books they can be recognized at a distance by red flags and banners draped over the doors and windows of the respective building.

The Young Communist League or YCL embraces all young people from the age of 16, when they out grow the children's Pioneer League. 90% of all persons between the ages of 16 to 24 belong to this organization, although they may attain communist membership as early as 17 or 20 years. Signed on as soon as they receive their passport at 16, they receive a YCL party ticket and must pay a small fee of 70 or 80 copecks a month. After this they are obliged to attend YCL meetings, go on harvesting trips on weekends, during the fall, to collective farms to help bring in the potatoes and grain and to keep their studies up to high standards. A flagrant violation of conduct or refusal to tow the rope will result in expulsion from the League, and is a block to personal progress in the Soviet Union, since membership is considered a reference to hiring, factories or institutes reviewing request for a place at higher educational institutions, but expulsions are fairly common about 20% being expelled before reaching the age when they may be chosen for communist party membership. A young ambitious student may become rather popular and powerful by being elected to the post of YCL secretary in his class at school or at work. A sure way to success is to remain at this post in one local school or institute, keeping high standards of marks and discipline, until chosen for party membership. In this way young people get a taste of what the Party can do for them so they have the right attitude.
