

just before we come to "Kalin square" the end of the central diadrom along the prospect. we find the two "restorants" or stand up cafes these cafes are located across the prospect from one another, the central structure is located to the in each, both places seem to have the same plan, it is why these were not built at opposite ends of the street for instance, is not known, although it would of course be more convenient. The reason is that its architectural planes for all the city in the Soviet Union, come directly from Moscow, which, as one can imagine is a big responsibility and since in the USSR, one pays for a mistake with ones head it seems that the logical reason, is that in building the street so it is the simple, and therefore safest way. another characteristic and interesting structure in Minak is the Trade Union building this houses an autotomium, offices for the training and costuming of the amateur groups who perform here periodically and a small dance hall.
 They are not as one might assume, offices of any Trade Union, they do not exist as we know them, since strikes or negotiations for higher pay or better working conditions are not allowed, of course, suggestions may be made by any workers but these all are handled through the local communist factory committees and are passed along or shelved as it suits the committee. An engraving of a structure at looks like a Greek temple with figures atop the V shaped roof, supported by large white marble columns all around. However a close look reveals not naked Greek gods but, from left to right, a woman complete with scope, a bricklayer holding a hammer a sports woman in track shoes and a nurse symbolizing status of a man in a double breasted suit holding a brief case, either a bureaucrat or a ~~general~~ ^{intellectual} ~~commander~~ apparently.

The rest of the prospect for the remaining miles is enclosed with the so familiar square shaped 5 story apartment houses, it may be said that at the present time 60% of all living is in apartments in 20 years 70% of all living quarters will be in these many storied barracks.
 The building ~~space~~ space is in full swing although at the 22nd congress Khrushchev announced that so many building projects were started in 1958-1960 that for a year after the finish of the congress only special important projects will be allowed to be begun in order to give a chance to the completion of sites already started, this is not the only reason, for the demand for raw materials and
