Dear Dick:

It's been a long time since I was up semi-residence in Dallas in the late 1950s, and started getting reacquainted with a great host of old friends and acquaintances with a lot of new ones, including yourself, Jack Krueger, my old college chum Joe Dealey, and those old-time cronies of yours who maintain general offices in the Criminal District Courts Building for the attorneys. I refer to Hugh Aynesworth, Tony Hunt, Carl Brown, Jack Beers, Griff Singer, Don Martin, Larry Dunn, Tom Dilliard, John Flynn, Larry Gove, Gene Biffle, Joe Laird, Louis Harris, Clint Cook, Glenn Moore, Bill Winfred, Don Millard, James Birmingham, John Goode, and many, many more, of course.

Over the years of my absence from the past I have done some litigating in the courts of Dallas, but not much, and however, I have enjoyed the privilege of Mr. Hill's accommodations, efficient administration of his highly
