 82% of all the 63000 Telle printed in the USSR in 1989 were returned or substituted with books, only 10% of these titles was for night reading, of the rest some were about applying the sciences and many of the best around physics and etc. The night's during the 2nd world as well as some novel about science by the origin

 Hemingway's Paul London, was now a favorite.

For an ~~example~~ reading, reading, reading about science by printing nations, one gets a very depressing picture and is overwhelmed by the quantity and richness of the life books in them, only, perhaps authors include: Bernard Shaw, Baumgardner, William Faulkner,

"Things as they are" England, and now classical writers, such as, Alexander Dumas, "and many" "great authors, "Huckleberry Finn and other kind" are also known and read in the USSR. Just what title are few and hard to find. Besides literature in progress, university
