

is "Thou shalt not kill". Now I say to you, we the people of the United States can put someone in the electric chair in self defense if the life and souls of other people is in danger by letting you live, but if you are repentant, if you see your guilt, if you promise not to lose your head and specially if you convert to Christianity your sentence should be life. I do not believe in the electric chair or death sentence unless it is as I said before for the safety of other lives and souls. We are Christians we should not kill. Your life in prison could save your soul and many souls who would give thanks for your living and may turn in anger because of your death or in pain like I would.

If someone kills we do not have to kill back, that is not justice it is vengeance. Justice would let you live in seclusion until death. Your soul then would be ready for death, and it would go to purgatory or Heaven or it would stay with you until Jesus returns. Now you may go to Hell, purgatory
