

I am not going to sign my name to this letter. That will help you to remember that even if you know the writer's name, you should never say it.

I have known you as an intelligent person, loyal and patriotic to yourself, your family, friends, and your country. It is in that respect I am writing you some things of deepest concern. To you, I regret there is no typewriter at hand. Here is my story:

I have in the past lived in a country in West Europe. There I slowly became aware that listening devices were being used to hear everything I said and did in my room and elsewhere. Then I began to see myself parodied, caricatured, etc., on TV and in the papers there.

I had a sizeable sum of money there with me in the bank. I decided to send it back to the U.S. The bank then made a really prize mistake and sent the money twice, so that I had twice the amount banked in America. I could have walked away and paid them nothing back.

I didn't do that. I paid them every cent. Instead of thanks they despised me and it was made clear by TV and the papers I had intended and caused the mistake.

Well, I left that country mostly because I just didn't like it for other reasons, and later I was back in America.

From then on I was a marked man, still am. I have no freedom to come and go.
