Dear Mr. Ruby,

I don't know whether or not I should be writing this to you, because I don't want to make your mind any more troubled than it is. I'm sure that the events of the last few days have terribly upset you, as they have every American, and with the added pain and sorrow you must feel, this letter may only act as salt on the wound.

But I've got to write if only to put down on paper the way that I feel about the death of Lee Oswald.

Perhaps in all the confusion of interrogation no one really explained to us why we, the American people, suffered so great a blow at Oswald's passing.

We loved our President, too. The national mourning in shocked realization of our great
