

terrible realization came to me that now he is gone forever—his leadership, integrity, ambition and guidance are no more.

But if Oswald was still alive, we would yet have something to cling to, a slim thread that could have told us why. Of course now that door is closed to us, never to be reopened. We have lost again.

John Kennedy is completely gone and already rock and roll is back on radio, the stores are again open, a life has become history and people are beginning to forget.

Through laws everyone of us can take part in our government, and be symbolically represented in every official act. When one person breaks a law, everyone suffers the consequences. This time the suffering was great.

I will pray for you,

M. Ruby,

Jacqueline Lyuka
Student, Centenary College