These photographs consist of four sets of photographs on large, rough paper and two sets prepared on smaller, glossy photographic paper, and one partial set on larger, glossy photographic paper.

Read with one or more of the initial consonant cards. Show the picture and read to say the name of the picture and LISTEN for the beginning sound. Turn card over, but don't read the word. Find out what the beginning sound is the same in all these words. Work through the consonant cards until the child is familiar with all of them. Follow the same plan with the consonant digraphs and blends.

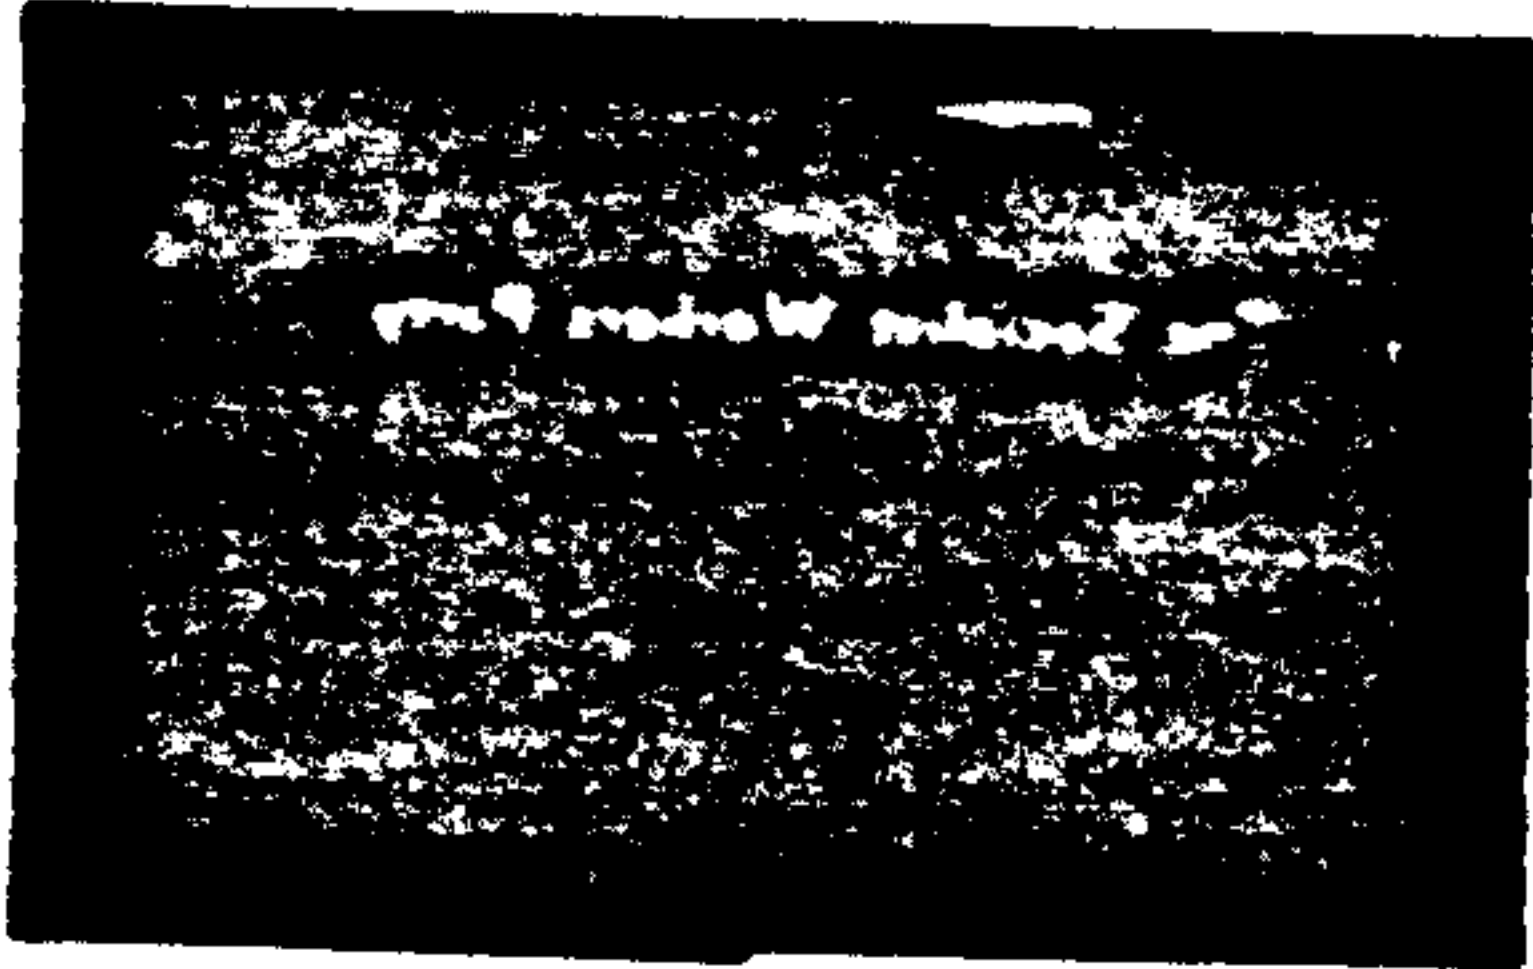

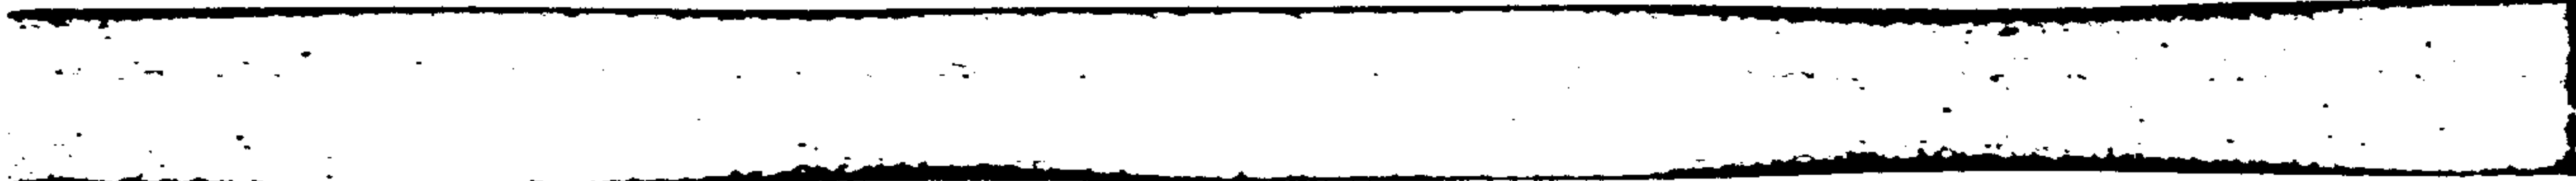

In playing with the word cards, follow same procedure as above but point out that these cards are all written (read) the same.

Any time in this learning process you can show a set of cards and say them for a list. Pick the word out, and have your own plan for the thoroughly learned cards and those that are still known. Back your learning with the card lists of all the cards you are using.
