Minsk,
Oct. 8, 1962.

Dear Fred,

I've got all your letters and none of the packages.

I went over Zeger's the other day. They got some books and magazines from you.

It's rather dull without you here. Almost nobody to speak to. Some weeks ago I was to a meeting with English students. They were peace marchers. They were a few for boys only so anyone was immediately captured by a dozen of chattering Russian girls. I managed to get close to some of the Britishers and spoke to them. They said I had a very good accent (English accent).

It's very nice you can subscribe Russian news papers in there so I need not send them to you.

I saw Nina. She told me she got a package from your wife and sent her best regards to her. I asked her to write.

Do you remember that tall boy fair-haired girl from the Conservatoire?
We were at the 'Eugene Onegin' performance with her at Харьков. I go on seeing her and she asked me about you. I said you were O.K. She said you were a very charming boy. She liked you. (Don't say that to your wife).

Well, I think I finish this letter now.
I set for French. Is it possible to get a French text book for English speaking people here? I'd like to have one.
I think, I'll send a book to you to see what happens.

My best wishes to Marina.

Your friend, Erik.

To Marina:

У нас сейчас необычно теплое
осень, много солнца.

Мне приходится много заниматься.
Я работаю у Павла и Игоря. С Анной мы ходим
в родильный кабинет родить (она сама напросилась).
Мила будет писать тебе. Попробуй все же
...? Было хорошо. Попробуй June.
