Shaw's Jury Sees Photo of Death Plaza

New Orleans, Feb. 15 (Reuters)—A photograph taken in Dealy Plaza the day President Kennedy was shot was introduced as evidence at the trial of Clay Shaw today over defense objections.

District Attorney Jim Garrison refused to show the picture to newsmen and testimony about what it showed was barred. The picture was taken by Mrs. Mary Moorman of Dallas, who was the state's last witness before the trial recessed for the weekend.

Court will resume at 9 a.m. Monday when former Texas Gov. John B. Connally and his wife are scheduled to testify. Connally was wounded while he and his wife were riding in the car in which Kennedy was slain.

Not in Warren Report

Mrs. Moorman was not mentioned in the Warren Commission Report on the assassination.

In Mark Lane's book "Rush to Judgment," Lane reports Mrs. Moorman took a picture of the motorcade while she stood across the street from the Texas School Book Depository. Lane said the sixth floor window of the depository, from where the Warren Report said Lee Harvey Oswald fired all three shots at Kennedy, was clearly visible in Mrs. Moorman's photo. What else it showed was not stated.

Another witness, James L. Simmons of Mesquite, Tex., said he saw "a puff of smoke" from the grassy knoll where Garrison said the shot that killed Kennedy came from. He said he ran to the top of the knoll and saw no one there but did find several footprints.
