

Dear Sir,

Dec 3, 1963

You're doing just what I knew you'd do - throw it on a dead man that can't defend himself. We have got the President was a hired killer that I do know for a fact. The one that ordered it done will go scot free as usual. You men were probably sent on wild goose chases and come up with no evidence. After reading books on criminology for 15 years I came to the conclusion there is no perfect crime.

Were there fingerprints on the gun?

Don't you think the one that ordered it done is more than guilty?

REC-52

... all clues I'd like to see you try to figure up?"

But if you think I'm going to give you the proof while I'm still living in the town why, you're out of your mind, even
and when I leave, me and my trailer leave together and I give you my word I won't be back in this town, ever period.

Yours truly —

Marie Donnelly
