ka at the invitation of the University of Alaska, to study the winter life of the Eskimo. The doctor has made two trips there before and spoke highly of a film produced by Walt Disney on the Eskimos.

Restricted Line

The receiving line guests' greeting was unusual in that most of them were not permitted to meet their hosts. Reportedly at his request and due to a very heavy schedule, Secretary Rusk asked that only the foreign scientists and the diplomatic representatives of their countries come through the line.

The Rusks, it was said, had only a half-hour to attend the party and felt they could be more gracious by this limitation. However, it did mean that the ropes and restraining chains and aids were more apparent than at a White House social function . . . also many of Americas great scientists went unmet.

In the line with Secretary and Mrs. Rusk were Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Seitz (he is President of the National Academy of Sciences), Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, past president of the group and chairman of the centennial, and Dr. Harrison Brown, Foreign Secretary of the National Academy.

As the Rusks left to again become hosts at a state dinner for the Bolivian President, the Secretary leaned over and gave Mrs. Bronk a big kiss. The Secretary had been President of the Rockefeller Foundation and Dr. Bronk has just been made President of the Rockefeller Institute.

Dr. Urey Attends

One of the top American scientists there was Dr. Harold Clayton Urey, a Nobel Prize winner. Before his work for the hydrogen bomb, Dr.

Urey worked in atomic fission. Also present was Dr. Leo Szilard, now active in disarmament, but reportedly one of the four men responsible for the creation of the atomic bomb.

Others were Sidney Chapin, who played a great part in the establishment of the United States Geological Survey; Melvin Calvin, Nobel Prize winner for his work in photosynthesis; Dr. George Kistaykowsky, formerly President Eisenhower's science adviser; Dr. Roger Revelle, who was the first science adviser to a Secretary of Interior, and Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission Glenn Theodore Seaborg.

Secretary Rusk's sense of humor is never at a loss even in a crowd. Last evening he noted a reporter looking totally undone with all the scientists and called her over to the receiving line. After he learned that although she was among so many science "greats" and had scarcely made it through high school chemistry, he said in amusement, "Well, I think I had better cause an incident if you have to have a story." There were none, but diplomacy, on all counts, was there.

World Scientists Entertained At Reception by the Rusk's

By DAISY CLELAND
Star Staff Writer

Leading world scientists gathered under the roof of the Pan American Union last evening for a reception, proving the remark of one guest that "for the first time science has become truly international."

The event was a party given by Secretary of State and

Mrs. Dean Rusk "in honor of those from other countries attending the centennial of the National Academy of Sciences of the United States."

The talk at the party mainly surrounded President Kennedy's address to them earlier in the afternoon.

Dr. Guorgy Szegetl of Hungary said, "It (the President's address) was very interesting and I think very important in that the science must connect the people (of the world) and not divide them."

Yugoslav View

Dr. Grga Novak, president of the Yugoslavian Academy of Science and Arts, also had praise for the President.

Asked if he felt that this meeting would help bring the differing political ideas of the world together, he replied, "Yes, very much so."

From the British Academy of Science and a Nobel Prize winner for his work on the physiology of the nervous system was Lord Adrian:

"I thought the President's speech was just the right thing for these times . . . I admired the statement and it is how a government should regard science in these days."

And even the Russians were for the President's talk.

Dr. V. I. Veksler of the Russian Academy of Science explained that he was not able to follow the President as he talked, but could do so from the written text. Through an interpreter he said:

"I was impressed that he talked as he did on pure science and the effect it would have on human welfare." He added that the meeting and Mr. Kennedy's address would help toward "world understanding."

From another part of the world and another facet of learning was Dr. L. L. Hammerich of the Royal Danish Academy of Science and Letters.

Dr. Hammerich puts his emphasis on the "letters" part of the academy and tells you with a twinkle that his hobby is the study of Eskimo languages.

He leaves Washington after the meetings, which last through Thursday, for Alas-

Pauling Rebuked by Academy For Improper Use of Forum

By WILLIAM HINES

Star Staff Writer

Nobel Prize winner Linus Pauling has received his commendation for using a National Academy of Sciences meeting as a forum in which to denounce the moon program.

He was summoned to the office of academy president Frederick Seitz yesterday afternoon, slightly more than 24 hours after he had blasted Project Apollo as a "pitiful demonstration" of misused billions. Later, Dr. Seitz indicated to reporters that he had chided Dr. Pauling for overstepping the bounds of propriety.

The 62-year-old Dr. Pauling had no statement for reporters after the meeting with the academy president.

Didn't Stick to Topic

"Guidelines given to speakers for their talks were that they would stick to what scientists could say with some assurance," Dr. Seitz told reporters. Dr. Pauling's topic at a scientific session Tuesday morning was "The Architecture of Molecules," a subject on which he is a world renowned authority and for which he won his first Nobel Prize eight years ago.

Dr. Pauling was given the peace prize for 1962 earlier this month by the Nobel Committee in Oslo, Norway. He is the only person in history to have won two full Nobel awards.

The blast at the Apollo program, which Dr. Seitz said was out of line, came at the conclusion of Dr. Pauling's talk on molecular chemistry. He walked from the lectern in the new State Department Auditorium to the center of the stage and there delivered himself on his brief, extemporaneous criticism of the moon project.

The meeting which Dr. Pauling addressed was the second of four scientific sessions held during the three-day centennial of the academy, which ended yesterday. Dr. Seitz indicated he regarded the Nobel laureate's action as in questionable taste.

"This occasion is our birthday party," the academy president told reporters. "We came here to celebrate our 100th anniversary."

Dr. Seitz said there is a wide range of views on the moon project's advisability, both inside and outside the academy. "But this ought not to be the main show here," he said.

Offers a Rebuttal Talk

The academy president said he would ask a pro-Apollo scientist to discuss the matter with reporters if they desire and the scientist agreed to do so. He suggested Prof. Harold C. Urey, like Dr. Pauling a Nobel winner in chemistry.

Later, an aide to Dr. Seitz told reporters Dr. Urey had declined, explaining that his views in favor of the moon program are already well known.

As long as Dr. Pauling was having nothing more to say, nothing would be gained by such a meeting with the press, Dr. Urey was quoted as saying. Dr. Pauling's confrontation with Dr. Seitz came just before the final scientific session of the three-day meeting. Four academy members, including the atomic bomb physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer, took part in the session.

Urges Science Hobby

Speaking of the "wonder" of scientific knowledge, Dr. Oppenheimer expressed hope that more and more laymen would take up science as an avocation as many hobbyists adopt sport, music or the arts. He also called for efforts to make the first taste of science more palatable to bright youngsters, with a view to getting them to go on with science as a career.

Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner, science adviser to the President; Dr. J. B. Flisk of Bell Telephone Laboratories and Prof. I. I. Rabi of Columbia University, also spoke at the final scientific session.

Tonight, in a function not directly a part of the centennial celebration, an American and a Soviet citizen will share the $50,000 Atoms for Peace award. The two, Dr. Edwin McMillan of the University of California and Prof. Vladimir Vekster, will be honored at a reception and dinner at the Mayflower.

Business Outlook . . . By J. A. Livingston

Visiting Russians Blind to Our Diffusion of Power

If the wall that separates West from East Berlin were merely brick, mortar, and tank traps, if the barricade separating Communist Russia and its satellites from the western world were only barbed wire and sentries, peace would be simple.

Men who understand one another can level walls, remove tanks and sentries, and clip barbed wire. But tearing down walls of misunderstanding demands mental readjustment.

Recently, two influential Soviet economists, Kyrill N. Plotnikoff, director of the Institute of Economics of the Academy of Science, and Nikolai Druzhinin, director of the Institute of Public Economics, both from Moscow, and three American economists were guests at my home in Philadelphia.

By any nation's measure, Plotnikoff and Druzhinin are outstanding men—intelligent, vital, honest, and dedicated. I feel sure, to peace and friendly relations with the United States. After dinner, we repaired to the living room for a discussion. They spoke English moderately well. And, in addition to an interpreter, one American economist could express himself in Russian.

PROFS. Plotnikoff and Druzhinin concede that America is a wealthy country. They saw for themselves the automobiles, the plentitude of food, the array of goods in stores, and the dress of people.

The Soviet Union is only about six-tenths as developed as the U. S. But, they reminded, "The Soviet Union started from a low base, and is now moving faster than the United States." So far, agreement.

Then the wall! It went up so fast that I can't remember what started it. Suddenly Plotnikoff and Druzhinin were saying that people in the United States are exploited. The Rockefellers control everything—the government, the factories, the railroads, the stores, the newspapers. Mr. Livingston, here, is a nice enough man. He writes articles for newspapers. But he's not free, and, compared to Rockefeller, he is nothing. Rockefeller, a rich man, had a better chance in life than Livingston.

In Russia, it's different. Plotnikoff came from a poor family. Now he, the son of a shoemaker, has status in the Soviet Union.

Prof. Joseph Raffaele, of Drexel Institute of Technology, observed that he too, came from a poor family. His father was a laborer from Italy.

"I speak facts," insisted Plotnikoff. In America people have no say in their affairs. They only think they do. Elections are meaningless. The capitalists—the Rockefellers—have control. All four Americans protested such 19th Century Marxism.

DREW Plotnikoff aside and showed him the New York Stock Exchange table with its 1300 listed companies. These represent, I said, pockets of economic power in America—sometimes cooperative, sometimes competitive, but usually independent and individual. All four Americans insisted that power was dispersed—through individuals who vote; through labor union leaders who influence legislation and industry; through millions of businessmen who make economic decisions.

Capital is capital was the disheartening response. Capitalists think alike. In the final analysis, the du Ponts, Fords, Rockefellers are the summit of power and will act together if capitalism is threatened.

How can I explain that one set of capitalists want to merge the Pennsylvania Railroad and the New York Central, that other capitalists will oppose and so will labor unions?

HOW can I make them see that the du Ponts want tax relief in distributing General Motors stock and that Congressmen object?

How can I make them believe that some U. S. businessmen want free trade and others high tariffs? How can I point out that power in the United States is mixed up, contradictory, competitive, and diffuse?

Am I unfair in thinking that Soviet economists are so steeped in Marxism that they see America through pre-focused eyes? Are they so preconditioned to centralized power that they cannot recognize the dispersion of wealth and power?

That, then, is our mutual tragedy. When we parted, we exchanged presents and promised to meet again. It was a pleasant and stimulating evening. But so disheartening—probably for them as for us.

He who sees a closed mind in another man must suspect that the other sees the same in him.

1. The undersigned was in contact with the Source on 13 April 1968 but there was not a formal interview since the time was spent in providing some recreation. Source was given six lists of names, copies of which are attached (Attachment A), and asked to make a short identification of as many of the individuals as he could.

2. Source readily recognized many of the names and stated that he had previously furnished information on most of the individuals. The undersigned indicated to Source that he was aware of this, but wanted the Source to give some specific information in regard to as many of the individuals as he could. It was also pointed out to the Source that the undersigned was aware that certain of the names were incorrectly spelled.

3. [redacted]

4. The names contained in Attachment A were taken from interviews with the Source on 24 and 25 January 1964 and no effort was made to correct any misspelled names.

5. A review of the memoranda prepared by Source (Attachment B) indicates that Source furnished no information in regard to the following names: [redacted]
