Russian Hotel Executives Inspect Soviet to Sheraton: Soap to Salad

By CORDELIA RUFFIN

A delegation of Russian hotel executives is touring Washington hotels this week comparing our ways with theirs.

The group, headed by Public Works Minister Leonid Shakvov, was invited to the U. S. by New York business magnate Robert W. Dowling, who met them on a recent tour of Russia.

TOP TO BOTTOM

Yesterday they inspected the Sheraton-Park Hotel, from the roof to the steamy basement laundry. They had a barrage of questions for manager Leonard Gorrell and his assistants—from the number of fire exits in the ballroom, to where the help eats.

They discussed prices. They inspected a $25 double room overlooking the swimming pool, the $55 presidential suite and a suite that rents for $1000 a month.

Miss Vera Ivakhina, manager of a large hotel in Moscow, said rooms there are $3 a day for singles, $5 for a double, and from $8 to $13 for suites.

"Do you give them soap, washcloths?" asked a Sheraton administrator.

Miss Ivakhina said yes, the customers are given soap and washcloths, but there is no air conditioning.

PROFITS

The group was very interested in profits. They visited the exhibit hall and asked Mr. Durrell the exact profit on that room. He said it was difficult to make a break down, but gave the round figure of four per cent.

"I think it is impossible to count the rooms separately, but they do," explained Valentin A. Revin, third secretary at the Russian Embassy here who had come along to interpret. After a visit to the roof, the group split up. Some went to inspect the electrical equipment, some to the registration desk, and Miss Valentina Chikolodkova, who designs kitchens, to the kitchen, where she was not pleased to see the food cooked and prepared in the same room. In Russia that is not allowed, she said.

The party inspected the garage room, a potato peeler, the storage rooms and laundry room where the employees were wilting under the overpowering heat.

"I could not bear it," said interpreter Revin.

After the kitchen tour Miss Chikolodkova was asked her impressions. She said she thought the kitchen was "quite an old one."

"The main difference between your kitchens and ours, are we have more sanitary conditions . . . it's such a high temperature. You can have some germs in the meat."

A Sheraton aide promptly replied, "not in ours."

After that small contretemps, the group ended the visit on a homey note. The pretty waitress who served them chefs salad said she was Russian and chatted gaily with them thruout lunch.
