SOVIET STRESSING BETTER U.S. TIES

Top Aides Are Said to Get Orders to Work Seriously for Negotiated Accords

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN

Special to The New York Times

MOSCOW, May 4—Top Soviet officials have told American diplomats here that they have been ordered to try seriously to negotiate agreements with the United States, reliable sources said today.

The Russian officials have said in recent days that they were told to pay closest attention to the conciliatory remarks about the United States made by Leonid I. Brezhnev, the party leader, at the recent 24th Congress of the Soviet Communist party.

Although attacking American policy in Indochina and the Middle East, Mr. Brezhnev said: "We proceed from the assumption that it is possible to improve relations between the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A."

Pravda, the Communist party paper, today printed an authoritative policy article by Georgi A. Arbatov, the director of the Institute of the U.S.A. and a recently elected candidate member of the party's Central Committee, in which he gave the Kremlin's theoretical justification for seeking better relations with the United States in the nuclear age.

Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, who is given direct responsibility for carrying out the Kremlin directive, met with Robert D. Beam, last Friday in an unpublicized, wide-ranging meeting, the first between the two men since the party congress. It was understood that the atmosphere, in keeping with the more outgoing policy toward the United States, was quite cordial.

At the party Congress, Mr. Gromyko stressed the desire for better relations and said that the Nixon Administration take Mr. Brezhnev's remarks seriously.

"We do not favor talks that resemble fencing matches," the Foreign Minister declared. What Foreign Minister declared. "What we want are serious negotiations."

Mr. Gromyko and Mr. Brezhnev both accused Mr. Nixon of following "zig-zag" policies that made it hard to reach agreements.

Diplomats here noted that despite the improved atmosphere there had not been any substantive change in any of the key issues such as the Middle Eastern situation, the talks on limiting strategic arms or on Berlin, that would indicate that relations in fact would turn toward the better. Some diplomats interpreted the Soviet policy as part of a campaign to shift blame for lack of progress in any important issues to the United States.

Others said the Soviet line seemed to indicate a desire to engage in a dialogue with Washington, thereby facilitating similar Soviet contacts with Western European countries that were wary of rather obvious Kremlin efforts in recent years to split the United States from its partners in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

U. S. Domestic Problems Cited

Mr. Arbatov's article, which was read with considerable interest here, seemed an effort at justifying to hard-line Soviet and foreign Communists the continuing Soviet efforts at negotiations with the United States and other capitalist countries.

He said that the United States, wracked by domestic and foreign policy crises, was seeking a way out of its problems, and he said it was possible that it would make "realistic correctives" in its policy toward the Soviet Union.

He commented that any "concessions" made by the United States could not change the nature of the imperialist power, but said that it was wrong to reject any agreements simply because a country was imperialist.

Mr. Arbatov said that in the nuclear age it was a matter of significance to the peoples of capitalist countries whether foreign relations were developing toward a nuclear war or toward improved relations and peaceful coexistence.

Even under conditions of peaceful coexistence, he said, "the struggle between the two systems" will continue, "but along a course in which this struggle does not lead to a military conflict."

Lenin's View Quoted

Lenin was quoted in Mr. Arbatov's article as having said that Communists must differentiate between those in the West "who lean toward a military solution of problems," and those who "lean toward pacifism, even of the most insignificant kind."

Mr. Arbatov affirmed that the party congress had called for the improvement of relations with the United States.

Relations between Moscow and Washington are still somewhat strained, in part because of Soviet anger over the continued anti-Soviet demonstrations in the United States by the militant Jewish Defense League. These demonstrations led Moscow last year to cancel a planned visit to the United States of the Bolshoi Ballet and Opera, and to postpone the sending of a planned Soviet folk art exhibit.

Because of the putting off of its exhibit, Moscow has barred the United States from sending an exhibit on research and development here. This in turn led to an American protest.

Georgi A. Arbatov, director of the Institute of the U. S. A., offered justification for improved U. S. - Soviet relations.
