

Dear Jim,

1/9/90

It was by accident only that I did not include this 4/6/89 letter with those I sent to Moschella. In it, quite obviously, in advance of the fact - was notifying him of the existence of relevant and withheld records that he so grossly lied about in his 12/15/89.

Although I'm not as utterly exhausted as I was immediately after this last operation I'm not very able and I've had considerable difficulty staying asleep. This morning, like yesterday, I was up at 1:30. But both mornings I was able to fool my body by taking ~~nap~~ a nap, fully dressed. This morning the cause may be the considerable itching along the cut down the entire sternum one point of which was slow healing. I may learn more tomorrow when I go back to Hopkins for some tests and further examinations and I suppose more or less of a discharge consultation.

I'm sure this is how I managed to miss the one letter I sent to Moschella and the several copies of which I provide herewith. They were all together for me to write them about after the passing ~~of~~ of some time only under something I didn't lift. That is how I didn't see them.

There may be other relevant letters that I've filed. When I feel up to that I'll compare what I've sent him and you with the file. I'm pretty sure that I got nothing else of any consequence and that there was no real response to what I sent in. There almost never was.

There were a few other things on CLICK, about which they still insist on a phony national security claim after more than 50 years. I remember them coming and my filing them. But there are also what the FBI would regard as embarrassing records relating to CLICK that remain withheld. These range from some of our/my exposes of Nazis involving our own people and their finks to Hoover's letter praising my writing. All this is referred to in the correspondence but earlier and I'm sure I have copies if you don't.

These things should make it apparent even to the FBI that it without any question did lie in Moschella's 12/15/89 and that it is a rather large, in context, lie, the reason, rather one of the reasons, I use that word if only one time. I don't think that or anything else will persuade the Moschellas to admit a mistake and correct it and thus I think even more than if and when presented to a court even the kinds of judges the Reaganites have inflicted on the nation might have a bit of trouble ignoring so significant and ~~gross~~ gross a lie. and they do have the relevant records they've not even bothered to deny having during the years. I've written them about those withheld records. (I do think that this underscores for you the problems you have in suing FBI/DJ, when they lie so regularly and unashamedly.)

We may be iced in. Still before daylight. So there may be a late postmark on this. I'm not permitted to drive and I'm not to be out when it is below freezing. So I've not yet walked to the mailbox. A neighbor or the medical technologist brings the papers in and puts the mail out but the technologist isn't coming today and besides, I'll won't have made the copies by then.

If Congress gets interested in FOIA again, particularly with the earlier history before the Senate, the records of the agencies with me is quite a record that should make for a good hearing and be informative to the Congress and others on their behavior with regard to the political assassinations.

Sorry, I should have remembered to put my old glasses on. Something seems to have happened to my eyes on close things and the new glasses are not as good for what is close. I've taken this up at least five times with the local ophthalmologist, have the third lenses in a year and they are still wrong on close work. ~~But~~ I'll get to that what I can but meanwhile, my apology for ~~more~~ worse than usual typing.

Best,

Harold
