Commission's Full Record
To Go in National Archives

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27

The original documentary record of the Warren Commission, including all working papers and the full testimony of all witnesses, will be permanently preserved by the National Archives and Records Service.

Printed and indexed copies of the commission's transcript, including the reports of other investigating agencies and photographs of exhibits collected by the commission, are scheduled for later publication by the Government Printing Office. This material reportedly will run to 20 or more volumes.

Officials of the commission said today that there had been no decision on the final disposition of "hard" exhibits such as the 6.5-millimeter Mannlicher-Carcano rifle or the .38-caliber Colt revolver owned by Lee Harvey Oswald.
