

TO BE DISCLOSED SOON: MORE ON JFK'S KILLING

WASHINGTON—Most of the records of the Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination of President Kennedy, will be made available to the public as early as next autumn.

A speedup in making original material accessible was ordered by the White House. Under usual rules of the National Archives in Washington, where the records are deposited, such material would not be available for 75 years.

Original documents which are expected to be made available include testimony by hundreds of witnesses, letters and diaries of Lee Harvey Oswald, and records of Oswald's military service and residence in the Soviet Union.

The Government will announce later how to apply for permission to examine the material, much of which was reproduced in 26 volumes made public by the Commission last year.
