WARREN COMMISSION

Sirs:

Yes, let there be a new and complete investigation into the assassination of President Kennedy, as Loudon Wainwright suggests (The View from Here, Oct. 7). For many of us there is an inner voice which now, three years later, seconds Mr. Wainwright's reaction. We were not and are not satisfied with the conclusion of the Warren Commission that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone.

RUTH M. DONALDSON

Sirs:

I am amazed and stunned at the growing hysteria of doubt concerning the Warren Report on President Kennedy's assassination. Being a former FBI agent and having worked on the assassination case, I salute the Report. Most people fail to realize this was the most thorough investigation ever conducted by the FBI. Countless FBI reports were furnished the Warren Commission. Every facet of the case outside the U.S. was thoroughly investigated with foreign police cooperation. Most important, Mr. Hoover would never have concluded his investigation if one scintilla of doubt had existed in his mind as to Oswald having an accomplice.

W. DONALD STEWART
Oxon Hill, Md.

Sirs:

Mr. Wainwright agrees with the recommendation that a joint Senate-House committee should be created to investigate the Warren Report further. But a better suggestion is that the investigation should be conducted by a non-governmental group of lawyers, historians and journalists with no vested interest in protecting the view of the Warren Commission and the FBI's reputation for accuracy.

PRENTISS B. ALGER
Elizabethtown, Pa.

Sirs:

Every day I see a new article questioning the death of President Kennedy and each one brings back memories that many of us would rather forget. He is dead and this is a fact we should just accept.
