In the backlash of tragedy: the Kennedy Assassination Scavengers

Since the Warren Commission released its findings, critics have surged forward to cast doubt on the Commission's methods and conclusions.

Are these assassination scavengers capitalizing on a national tragedy in a rush to dollars?

This disturbing question is the subject of a startling article in Sunday's NEW YORK Magazine. By Richard Warren Lewis, it's about the people who are exploiting the death of a President. From Mark Lane's controversial "Rush to Judgment" to the weird Housewives' Underground to the lunatic fringe assassination buffs. A shocking, ominous document.

Also in NEW YORK, Harriet Van Horne's exposé of the radio and TV stations who broadcast the bigoted programs of the extreme right-wing. And the weakness of all three major networks in the face of the radical right.

WJT is stirring things up.
