Shooting Stirrs Speculation

The tragic sharp - shooting by that U. of Texas gunman seems certain to add fuel to the continuing controversy over the death of President Kennedy. The question of how any one individual could have fired so many shots so quickly and so accurately at a moving vehicle and the unsettled matter of how one bullet, fired from a helicopter, could have hit both the President and the Governor of Texas, has kept speculation alive. The Warren commission report, which should have ended speculation, seems merely to have spurred it and there will probably be a new rash of guesswork following the speculation about the shooting from the tower at
