LANE SEEKS DEBATES WITH AIDES OF PANEL

Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 18—Mark Lane, the attorney who wrote "Rush to Judgment," a criticism of the report by the Warren Commission, renewed today his offer to debate members of the commission on the assassination of President Kennedy.

In a telephone interview, Mr. Lane said that he had invited any member of the commission to a debate and that he had offered to pay any expenses that might be incurred. He also said that "numerous" radio and television stations had invited members of the commission to debate with him and that the stations' offers had been rejected.

"It's indefensible," he said, "because it's indefensible."

Mr. Lane also denied an accusation by Wesley Jay Liebeler, an acting professor at the University of California Law School. In an interview on Oct. 22, Mr. Liebeler, a former assistant counsel on the staff of the Warren Commission, said that Mr. Lane had never agreed to debate him on the commission's findings.

Mr. Lane said that he had accepted an invitation from the student body at the University of California, Los Angeles, to debate Mr. Liebeler when the latter made the charge. Mr. Liebeler, he said, has since accepted the invitation. It is scheduled for Jan. 25 at the university.

In an article by The Associated Press appearing in today's New York Times, Mr. Lane was incorrectly described as Mrs. Oswald's attorney. END
