NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 5 —

The jury to try Clay L. Shaw on a charge of conspiring to assassinate President Kennedy was completed today.

Tomorrow, District Attorney Jim Garrison is scheduled to outline his theory of the assassination to the 12 jurors and two alternate jurors. In the past he has accused agents or former agents of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Testimony in the case may not begin until Friday.

The jury was completed this morning with the acceptance of Robert J. Burlet, 46 years old, as the second alternate juror. He is president of a crane equipment company.

About 1,400 prospective jurors had been called before both sides agreed on the 14 jurors, all of whom are men.

Jurors Pose for Photos

After the jury was sworn in this morning, Criminal District Judge Edward A. Haggerty Jr., the trial judge, led reporters and photographers to the Rowntowner Motel about a mile from the Criminal Courts building to take pictures of the jury.

The jurors posed stiffly in suits and ties for the photographers after Judge Haggerty had supervised the placement of chairs alongside the motel pool.

After posing seated, the jurors were then marched around the pool at the judge's instruction so that television cameramen could get "some movement" in their film.

Before adjourning to the motel bar for a scotch, the judge offered race-track passes to the reporters.

In a brief interview in the motel bar, Judge Haggerty indicated that he would allow Mr. Garrison to present evidence surrounding the assassination even though Mr. Shaw is charged only with conspiracy.

There has been speculation in New Orleans that Mr. Garrison hopes to bolster his case against Mr. Shaw by emphasizing the horror of the murder.

"I can't tell the prosecution what testimony to present," Judge Haggerty said in the motel interview. "If it wants to overprove its case, that's its business."

During the questioning of prospective jurors over the last two weeks, Assistant District Attorney James L. Alcock has said repeatedly that the prosecution might not prove the murder of President Kennedy but added this was not necessary to establish the conspiracy.

However, Mr. Garrison has subpoenaed several witnesses from Texas, including two Dallas police officers who were motorcycle escorts for Mr. Kennedy on the day he was killed, and John B. Connally Jr., former Governor of Texas, who was critically wounded by a shot fired at the President's car. Mr. Garrison also has subpoenaed a motion picture film taken of the assassination. end
