

KENNEDY ASSASSINATION- Professionalism makes the difference!

(From The Midlothian Mirror)

The thoroughness with which the assassination was planned boggles the imagination. No possibility was overlooked. Nothing was left to chance.

An example of that thoroughness is revealed by the testimony which stated that both the power and the telephones of the Texas School Book Depository went dead just as the president's motorcade approached the building.

The testimony of Miss Geneva Hine points this out. (Vol. VI, p.395) Miss Hine had volunteered to stay at the switchboard in the TSBD Building while all the other employees went to the windows to watch the president and Mrs. Kennedy pass. Here is a small segment of Miss Hine's testimony:

MR. BALL: Did you stay at your desk?

MISS HINE: Yes sir; I was alone until the lights all went out and the phones became dead because the motorcade was coming near us and no one was calling, so I got up and thought I could see it from the east window in our office.

MR. BALL: Did you go to the window?

MISS HINE: Yes, sir.

If this were an ordinary court case, we would say Joseph A. Ball is the dumbest attorney who ever obtained a license. But Ball knew what he was doing. He knew to skip the implications in this amazing revelation. Ball didn't miss a step in moving away from Miss Hine's terribly important statement.

Why did the lights go off and the telephones go dead as the president approached?

Certainly we cannot learn from the testimony of the Warren Commission. However, a clue is found in Volume P, Page 6, of the Texas Attorney General's Report. Eddie Piper, janitor for the Texas School Depository Building told the Texas Attorney General that Oswald always made several short telephone calls during his lunch break.

We feel quite certain Oswald was not one of the riflemen. Therefore, in order to be sure Oswald was not making one of his several short phone calls during the lunch break, both the power and the telephones had to be disconnected for a short period.

Suppose Oswald could have proved by the person on the other end of the line that he was having a telephone conversation at the exact time the shots were fired? No chance could be taken that the chosen patsy might prove his innocence.

That, my friends, is thoroughness in planning which can be admired by perfectionists everywhere. But when it is being used to take over a great democracy, we can only weep.
