Dear Harold Weisberg

Again, a thousand thanks (as they say in Denmark) for your reply, started 26th May and continued on 28th May. I am very grateful for everything you have done to share the essence of your own longheld interest and hard labours in this matter.

There is no point in asking you for any additional information I may need after reading other books. I know now your answer, and it is one I am thankful for- there are no answers, neither through you nor through other authors who may proclaim they have made discoveries.

Having said that, I do have one more question, and it does not relate to anything I have read. Indeed, it comes entirely from what I have not read. It is something I cannot visualise, and I hope you can tell me those things that will make it clear.

If you were to take the point on the kerbside in Dealey Plaza where the 'missed bullet' hit the concrete, and draw a line to connect with where the President's head had been through the time the shots were fired, where would the other end of this imaginary line end up? Or, what would be the answer to this question if the starting point was taken as the area near the manhole where a bullet was reported hitting by Patrolman J.W. Foster? Where would the arc drawn by these lines touch if continued on beyond the other side of the President's head (as the most likely target)?

I enclose photocopies of two recent news items appearing in our local paper relating to the autopsy and the X-rays. Please do not feel you have to reply to these two stories in any way. I merely include them here for your information.

I do not know how you make your living doing all of these unprofitable things like writing to me, but it occurred to me I could very likely get a NZ newspaper (maybe one of the more respectable and less sensational Sunday papers) to buy a story from you covering the current position with "release" of further documents by Congress and the CIA, together with a general overview to the assassination. If I knew more I could write something myself, but I know I am only scratching the surface of what is a mountain of information and misinformation. If you wish to take this matter further I can either put you in touch with a NZ editor or make the first approach for you. It may even be possible to get the article syndicated here for publication in NZ and Australia. Let me know if this interests you. I would be more than happy to help you in any way I can.

I hope your health is holding up and that you are now over all the travelling to Baltimore for medical treatment.

All the best,
yours,
Dal
