

Dear Dal,

8/6/93

The article is fine. I hope it got a good reception. I've written ^{Jenny} ~~Henry~~, copy enclosed. And as you can see I'm dozing a bit. I suppose from the sleep apnea. I may have to knock off for a bit but I do not want to forget the pix. The best and clearest print would come from AP/Wide World photos. Dozing again. Of ^{Altgens} Altgens. It is copyrighted. They had one price for scholarship but a higher one for book use. I've written two other letters to help on that, both enclosed.

While dozing I wondered if the audience down there would appreciate an article on the Hades Not Camelot chapter of Post Mortem. If you think so, feel free to use it.

It could supply a separate article, too. Different than the one you have in mind and for a different publication.

Wide World/AP, last address of which I know was 30 Rockefeller Center, New York.

Especially considering the cutting, I think the piece turned out very well.

Glad you send me the entire paper. It has a good look, livelier than the papers here. And when they pay you, please keep it all. That still, not even counting your time, may not return your actual costs.

In the package, which made good time, there were only the negatives. Didn't I have some prints enclosed? If I did I'd like to have them for other uses.

I never conjecture of the shooting but the shot to the front of the neck could not have struck the earth in the Plaza. It would have been the street. And it happens that a witness reported seeing an impact in that area. Virgie Rachley, I think. I go into that in WW II. I've never been convinced that the military ammo was used and I'm certain that soft ammo caused the or a head wound. If it had been soft on the nonfatal wounds that would have show in the X-rays and it doesn't.

Tony Summers and his book are both disappointments to me. His Hoover book is much less than it could have been and the single-source stuff that has little credibility did hurt it other than in sales.

I do not lean to the idea that it was military intelligence but what you say about renegades seems reasonable and I've always considered that to be a possibility. As for the military, that is a bit complicated to go into here but you'll see what I can say with safety and responsibility in NEVER AGAIN! I've put a fair amount of information together on that in it. Some new.

Back to Summers, he spent days here. So also did two London college professors working for him. They copied all they wanted, took much of my time, borrowed my wife's transcribing machine—can you begin to appreciate how stony he was when he had them transcribe from a pocket tape recorder and would not buy a machine — and it took me months and months of repeated effort to get that machine back and he did not send me a copy of the book.

Again thanks, and with love,

Harold
