COPY FOR HAROLD

Dear Don

Here is a copy of my letter with the final list of titles I sent away for to "The Last Hurrah Bookshop". It is going to cost me, but I need some A/V material for my lectures next year, and I want to have a good personal library handy when I get round to writing my course notes, and for putting together the material for the text book too. The book by Fensterwald I will send down to you when the parcel arrives from "The Last Hurrah". Does that name have any significance for you? I have a feeling it comes from the US Civil War?

Since talking to you last weekend I have finished my reading of 'Inquest' by Epstein, it gave me a really good view of how the WC operated, and how the WC saw itself.

My real reason however for this note is to give you Harold's address. I cannot recall if I gave it to you last year or not but you will need it to write to him. To reiterate, Harold asked if you could share with him any of the things your father may have said to you in regard to what the US Navy was like in the early 1960s, and I think Harold may have a special interest in the period your father spent serving under Admiral Moore (is this how you spell it?). I do not know any more than this. I passed on to Harold your father's comment about how he thought the US Navy was the more politically conservative of all the US military, how it was the service most willing to use nuclear weapons, and that your father said he thought if any branch of the military was involved in the assassination, in any way, it would most likely be the Navy. I trust I quoted you accurately.

In haste, must away. All the best to you and to Rose, and to your very young Craig (I have forgotten the name, sorry, please tell me again, this time I will write it down).
