Productive witnesses - James W. Altgens 1/4/68

Possibly reading or rereading what I have written of witnesses in the two chapters of part three of WHITE ASH II takes more time than you may have. There is more on him in WHITE ASH and PHOTOGRAPHIC WHITE ASH. There is a copy of the unpublished index # of WHII in your office. I gave it to Pam.

Using him as a witness can serve a number of purposes. I think those that do not immediately suggest themselves will have a very good effect on the jury and have historical need.

He was one of the closer eyewitnesses to the assassination. If his camera was set through-the-lens reflex, he had an excellent view of the equivalent of 2000 ft. He gave the most graphic testimony about the spray of brain matter over the left side, which is entirely inconsistent with the right side of the head only having exploded out. Going along with some of my unpublished material in FROM WHITE ASH which is entirely substantiated by the E film, he can be used to destroy the official explanation of the fatal wound. He can testify to the wind, having gotten a picture of Mrs. Sprague as the car turned from Main into Houston and as she grabbed her hat to keep the wind from blowing it off.

He was challenged - Liebler to a reconstruction of where he was standing. Liebler marked off but maintained the wrong position. In fact, Liebler marked the position where Altgens was, not Altgens. I used this and argued, for Liebler put him in the wrong place, therefore, the chart I made based on Liebler's marking of Altgens position when he took his most famous picture locates the car at the wrong place.

Despite the importance of his picture - and any other he might have made - the FBI avoided him until it could no longer, for about eight months. There had to be a very good reason for this. I suggest that in a competent questioning it will come out. I think it is not done because of the brain spray, although that could be argued. In fact, so little was known about him, although his is the most famous single picture of all and was the first on the wire, that by the time Sprague got to talk to him, Altgens did not recall how many pictures he actually made. I think it is done, from what Sprague told me. The others seem to be of less significance, but they do delay the time he could have gotten onto the grassy knoll to the point where anyone there would have disappeared or merged with the searchers, something Liebler was careful to avoid in his questioning. It was public embarrassment that finally caused the FBI to interview Altgens.

Here, as a photographer, he may be assumed to be a bit sharper as an observer than most people. I think that were he led into his exchange with Liebler over how close he was, he might recall things. This entire thing would be very destructive of the official fiction in a most comprehensible way, which I think would be effective with the jury and the judge. Merely showing how he was avoided, that he was questioned, and then that he had unknown pictures should be very effective. I have twice placed calls to Sprague, but he had not responded. I have wrote a meaningless memo on his interview with Altgens.
