

The FBI agents told ALKINS that WELLS, et al. had never interviewed him but that he was unable to do so at that time.

SPRAGUE further related ALKINS' story about his interview with the FBI. The only thing which ALKINS had to add in addition to his testimony before the FBI agents, which was in the 25 volumes, is the story about the boy who had had an epileptic seizure. The FBI agents told him (ALKINS) that when the ambulance reached Parkland Hospital the young boy stated that he was perfectly all right, that he had totally recovered from his seizure, and that he desired no medical attention. He promptly jumped out of the ambulance and ran off. The agents said that days later they were able to locate the boy taking his name and his address.

TOM BETHELL has told me that the name of this boy was JERRY BELKNAP. The references in the volumes are CE 1058; CE 1974 (Radio Log) (page 15-17); SAWYER Exhibit page 399. There is an FBI report in the National Archives which gives the name JERRY BELKNAP as the boy having had the seizure. SPRAGUE indicated his suspicion of the peculiarity of the boy's actions upon arriving at Parkland Hospital. He further speculated that the possibility might be that the boy had gone there on the pretense of having had an epileptic fit in order to do something at the hospital, which SPRAGUE thought might possibly be to plant CE 399 which was later found between the mattress of the stretcher and the metal portion of the stretcher.
