.....I just don't see how two highly placed agents on the ground in Dallas could by accident reference two wholly contrarian timeframes on the paraffin test. Gordon Shanklin in a statement and reported in the NY Times in which he refers to the afternoon immediately after his arrest on the 22nd (my 2:50 P.M. supposition) and, now, Clarke at 12:00-1:00 AM on the 23rd in a "premeditated" memo. Whether there was or was not a second set somewhere, these glaring factual errors by Hoover's "eyes and ears," I am unable to merely dismiss as the incidental result of "bad intel." I do not know about NAA testing on the chemical wash "runoff" from the washing of the casts vs. the cast themselves after washing. I always presumed the latter. If you look at Courtland Cunningham's testimony, he always refers to "the casts' after washing in his detailed explanation of paraffin testing by NAA. What's interesting is he makes it sound like they were aware of NAA as he states they were using a "blind study" of paraffin casts for NAA testing (not spectrographic testing). I'll move on to another topic from here should there be nothing further "value-added" to anything in this area to your work. Regards.
