I am not aware of such a report. My source is pretty conservative-Warren Commission sworn testimony by a Dallas police officer that when he got to the top of the knoll he encountered a man who produced Secret Service credentials, so the cop let the man go. The Warren Commission then determined there were no SS personnel in the Plaza, end of investigation.

The records review board was able to cause release of local news film outtakes from 11/22/63 that had been saved (hidden) by a local TV employee. These outtakes showed that the first film on the reel after the shooting was of men in black suits behind the pagoda in the driveway area waving off the cameraman from going behind the pagoda. Later these outtakes show a picket line of men in suits and trenchcoats in the parking lot behind the pagoda keeping specators from entering the parking lot from the pagoda area- a large corwd had gathered at the pagoda and these trenchcoats were keeping them from going further toward the railroad yard. Not necessarily sinister, but interesting to me anyway.

Thanks Dan. As I recall and have in a "Grassy Knoll" file there were multiple witnesses who drew attention to a phony SS man flashing credentials. Is it your memory that the SS credentials were produced by the CIA. It sounds too outra to be true but I think I read this at one time.
