

MOTHER IN HISTORY

JEAN STAFFORD

WHEN a writer as gifted as Jean Stafford encounters a subject as highly charged as Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, almost anything can happen. As Miss Stafford explains, "I had come to Texas to see Mrs. Oswald because she is (as she was frequently to tell me) 'a mother in history.'"

Here in memorable prose is Jean Stafford's record of their meetings on three consecutive days in Mrs. Oswald's Fort Worth home—an interview that Mrs. Oswald completed on the third day by taking Miss Stafford to her son's grave. The portrait—shocking and startling—that emerges is not only of "a mother in history" but of a mother that history will remember.

"It is fascinating to read, implacable in its inferences, and impeccable in its presentation."

—MIRIAM M. KICKS SERVICE

A MOTHER IN HISTORY

By JEAN STAFFORD

$2.95, now at your bookstore

Second printing

FARRAR, STRAUS & GIROUX

Administrative, P. J. Ferrar, New York, N.Y.