TO THE EDITOR:

In reference to the story about the FBI agents removing the assassination evidence, I hope you stick to your story if it is true and won't change it just to please some high-ranking official, as so many other people have done in Dallas.

I used to believe the Warren Report and the writers of the critical book, but it did not change my mind.

Dallas officials and Dallas newspapers did. They are scared stiff of somebody. The excuses, the alibis, the story changing, etc. It is beginning to boarder on the ridiculous. Do they think the American people are so stupid that they will believe anything? Dallas police, newspapers and FBI should think about the old saying: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive." It certainly applies to their situation.

Kay Roberts.
