"Judge Brown had strange notion he could not control news reporters and television people in and around the Dallas County Courthouse to eliminate what he himself called the 'circus atmosphere'," Gertz said. Then Gertz quoted from what he said was Brown's unplublished manuscript.

"Judge Brown says here several times that during the trial there was a 'Circus atmosphere." He also says that he thought if he had to go through the trial again that he would admit only a dozen reporters on a pool basis to the courtroom. Brown himself concludes that Jack Ruby did not get full justice."

Gertz referred often to the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision reversing the Dr. Sam Sheppard murder case decision on the ground of excessive news coverage.
