GAIN FOR U.S. SEEN

Publication Is Viewed by President as Step for Better Relations

By TOM WICKER
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28— President Kennedy said today that the publication in the Soviet Union of his two-hour interview with the editor of Izvestia was "a marked step forward in American-Soviet understanding."

Mr. Kennedy said he hoped publication of the interview "will lead to further intensification of free communication between our two countries at all levels."

It was evident that the White House was pleased by the results of what had been a five-month effort to place some of the President's views before the Russian people, The interview, as published, took up a third of Izvestia's front page and all of the second page.

[In Moscow, observers said the President's remarks would give the Soviet people new information and stimulate independent thinking.]

Millions Reached

Because it is the official Government newspaper, Izvestia reaches millions of Soviet 11-29-61 NJT readers.

Pierre Salinger, the White House press secretary, said that "any time an American President can get his views over to the Soviet people as precisely as the President was able to do, I think it's a step forward."

White House satisfaction, official sources said, was hardly marred by the one substantive change Izvestia made in the text of the President's interview with Aleksei I. Adzhubei, its editor.

The newspaper did not alter or delete any of Mr. Kennedy's comments, but it made—for what were believed to be internal political reasons—one change in a statement by Mr. Adzhubei.

Administration Blamed

Commenting upon the aftermath of Premier Khrushchev's visit to the United States in 1959, Mr. Adzhubei said: "But unfortunately the results of that trip were not completely satisfactory." The approved text carried that sentence.

As Izvestia published it, however, it read: "But the positive results of that trip were wrecked and brought to nothing by the well-known actions of the then American Administration."

This was an allusion to the celebrated "U-2 incident," when an American reconnaisance plane was shot down over the Soviet Union. This took place a few months after Mr. Khrushchev's visit here and led to his cancellation of a return visit by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Mr. Khrushchev also used the incident to cut short a summit

Continued on Page 19, Column 4

Kennedy Calls Izvestia Interview Advance in U.S.-Soviet Relations

Continued From Page 1, Col. 4 into Russian as faithfully as meeting between the United possible. States, the Soviet Union, Britain Russian text, as if it were an and France in Paris in 1960.

Mr. Kennedy's view of the lit into English—a version differsingle textual change was reported to be that Mr. Adzhubei's ing somewhat from Mr. Romagoriginal sentence was ambiguate as it could be made to the meanured by Mr. Khrushchey's ing of the original. This was internal critics as placing the done to surmount the difficulty seven-column headline—the The interview was a pioneer maximum—was the result of a venture into international comlengthy and involved process. It began with high-speed shorthand and included the transposition of the text from English to the West are nothing new to Russian and back to English Mr. Khrushchev, although Unitagrain nguages.

What readers in the United The Soviet Premier seems to medy's replies in English were American columnist doing the translated by Georgi Bolshi-interview did not stick to the kov, the editor of the Eng-lish-language Soviet magazine later, "They didn't quibble." USSR. Alexander Akalovsky, a State Department interpreter, was present to check on Mr. Statistics of the Bolshikov's interpreting.

English and Mr. Bolshikov's tions. Censorship on outgoing translation of Mr. Adzhubei's dispatches no longer prevails. Russian, Jack Romagna, the One American newspaper man White House shorthand report-was asked to let Mr. Khru-

Mr. Kennedy's view of the it into English—a version differoriginal document, and rendered preted by Mr. Khrushchev's ing of the original. This was internal critics as placing the done to surmount the difficulty responsibility upon him for the of putting some English phrases unsatisfactory results of his and meanings into Russian.

As Mr. Kennedy answered each question, Mr. Adzhubei have been an issue in Soviet launched into counterdiscussion, politics, with Mr. Khrushchev, fattafully reflecting the general and Mr. Adzhubei, his son in outlines of Soviet policy. In genlaw among their leading advocated with Kennedy then would and Mr. Adzhubei, his son-in- outlines of Soviet policy. In genlaw, among their leading advo-eral, Mr. Kennedy then would cates.

White House sources said At no line the that since no change had been exchanges become acrimonious, made in the President's come although Mr. Adzhubei's debatments, Mr. Kennedy believed in the exchanges become acrimonious, made in the President's debatments did not diminicontradict and dispute several of ish the success of the interview, the President's statements and Publication in Izvestia today at one point to urge him to adoff the text spread under a mistake."

seven - column headline — the The interview was a pioneer maximum—was the result of a yenture into international com-

What Soviet readers got was viewing him have stuck mostly a Russian text of an English to the American practice of transcript of a dialogue in both asking questions rather than What readers in the United The Soviet Fremier seems to States have is an English transcript of the Russian text.

During the interview, Mr. Adalways, he has required the subments in Russian and Mr. Kendon of questions in advance, ments in Russian and Mr. Kendon on one such occasion, the ready's realiss in English were American columnist doing the olshikov's interpreting.

Working from Mr. Kennedy's accurately in Soviet publica-

One American newspaper man er, took down a verbatim rec-shehev go over what he had ord of the whole conversation written and did so. Another had Mr. Romagna then rendered to agree only to let the Prea typed English text from his notes.

In another case, Soviet and notes.

The next day, Sunday, the two Russians and Mr. Akalov-to publish an "official" version sky put in a twelve-hour day of an interview and required the at the Soviet mission in New American editor in question to York. First, they translated put the article into the third Mr. Romagna's English text person without direct quotation.