

19 June 1968

Dear Cyril,

Over the weekend I did an article, on the same general lines as the one in the June issue of TMO, changing the title to "Three Assassinations." The point has already been made--we are running out of adjectives, and little can now be said that is not repetitious. I wonder if anything really remains to be said about the JFK autopsy, after your appendix for Tink 's book. There seem to be no forensic medical problems as yet in the MLK or RFK assassinations. I am at a loss to suggest a topic, but will write again if I think of something. Frankly, my thinking is not very clear these days.

All the best,

Glumly,
