Dear Mr. Feldman:

Had you not fancied yourself as the right path finder for Arnoni, perhaps your memory would not have played the one-upmanship trick on you it seems to have played. You would then not have falsely recalled having opened my reluctant eyes to the "possibility of a Russo-American military cooperation against China..." Who knows, you might even have recalled learning of that possibility from the pages of TMO. That such might in fact have been the case occurred to me when, in an effort to break the vicious circle of our mutual attributions of self-righteousness, I did precisely what you recommended: I located and re-read the letter I wrote you on December 29, 1965, regarding your article. I enclose here a copy of that letter so that you may at last realize who of us is self-righteous and claims undue credit.

Your integrity faces a challenge: Will you resort to verbal trickery to try to talk yourself out of your predicament, or will you honestly admit having placed yourself in a predicament?

Sincerely,

M. S. Arnoni
