Dear Shelley:

Winchester made 4,000,000 rounds of 6.3 Mannlicher cartridge ammunition on a government contract award in 1952. All of this ammunition was delivered to the Raritan Arsenal in New Jersey for government disposition. According to the Warren Report, some 2,000,000 rounds later found their way into mail order and a few sporting stores.

Winchester never released any to the public.

Enclosed is a current Ammunition and Component catalog.

Hope all is well with you.

Best regards,

Jim Rikhoff

THE PERISCOPE

CAMPAIGN '64

New Orleans

Barry Goldwater plans to keep pace with those newsmen who are using tape recorders to double check his campaign quotes. The senator's staff plans to fit him out with a pocket transmitter that will provide him with his own on-the-spot recordings of off-the-cuff remarks.

Portland, Ore.

GOP Gov. Mark Hatfield got along just dandy with Lyndon Johnson during the President's flying visit here last week. Hatfield presented Johnson with a myrtle-wood bowl bearing the state seal filled—much to Johnson's amazement—with "LBJ for President" buttons.

Chicago

One Republican campaign secret is out: the author of the No. 1 Goldwater slogan, "In your heart, you know he's right." The creator is Chicago advertising man Leo Burnett.

GOP National Headquarters

One top official here is now charging openly what lower echelons have been whispering—that the Democrats have planted a high-level spy in the Goldwater camp. One example cited: the Goldwater speech announcing formation of a blue-clip GOP foreign-policy advisory committee was given to reporters on the candidate's plane—in the air. When they landed, however, they found LBJ had stolen the GOP's thunder by announcing his own such committee.

DIPLOMATIC POUCH

Along Embassy Row

Soviet diplomats are dropping quiet hints that the Kremlin is about to replace Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. The new man, they say, will be Ambassador to the U.S. Anatoly Dobrynin. Top-level Washington officials, with whom the 45-year-old Dobrynin has always had the most cordial relations, are pleased with the prospects of such a shift.

Johannesburg

Tucked away in bank vaults here in Johannesburg is a clue to what course Southern Rhodesia will take should Britain refuse its 220,000 white citizens the independence they demand. Its all-white government has ordered and stored two sets of new currency here. One is in British pounds, the other in rands—the currency of the Union of South Africa's government.

Rome

During his swing through Europe, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. made two predictions about the future of the American Negro. He was "sure," Dr. King said, that there would be a Negro in the Presidential Cabinet within four years and it was "highly likely" that a Negro could be elected President in the next 25 years.

Lourenço Marques, Mozambique

Russia's ubiquitous fishing trawlers have a new mission. Two of them have suddenly started cruising off the coast of Portuguese East Africa. Since Soviet fishing boats rarely appear here, the speculation is that they are keeping tabs on Chinese ships entering the port of Dar es Salaam in neighboring Tanganyika.

United Nations

Britain's Harold Wilson has already penciled in one foreign-policy change in the event he and the Labor Party take over. To upgrade British relations with the U.N., he would make his ambassador here a full-fledged member of the Cabinet. Thus the U.N. man would report directly to the head of the London government instead of going through the Foreign Office.

CROSS-COUNTRY WIRE

Washington, D.C.

Atomic scientists gave the Warren Commission one positive piece of evidence linking Lee Harvey Oswald to the assassination of President Kennedy last November. By using a new process called "neutron activation analysis" (which enables experts to identify submicroscopic particles), they were able to find traces of gunpowder on Oswald's cheek. This established that he had fired a rifle about the time of the assassination.

New York City

Robert Kennedy's partisans have one answer for New York critics who claim they can't understand the candidate's "strange" (i.e., New England) accent. With an eye on Kennedy's much-publicized new residence on New York's suburban Long Island, the RFK men laugh off the criticism with, "That's his Glen Cove accent."

State Department

Averell Harriman will soon find himself on another mission, as advance man for a grand tour of Europe by LBJ in 1965. Plans call for stops in Britain, Italy, Germany, and France. French President Charles de Gaulle already has
